

Research Processes & the Importance of Good Project Planning

Sophie Hyndman

Think about the people you will need to involve in your research project.

The type of people* you may need as co-applicants.

experience, subject & methods expertise.*

The type of people you may need, in addition to co-applicants, as part of your broader research team.

Other types of people / groups of people / organisations you are likely to need to consult or work with to develop and deliver your research.